CABINETS

Framed vs. Frameless Cabinets?

At Cabinet Corp, we offer a variety of fully overlaid door styles and finishes for both our framed and frameless cabinetry. While our framed cabinets lean more towards a traditional design aesthetic, our frameless are more contemporary. Knowing the functionality differences play a key role when designing your next project.

Framed Cabinets

Framed Cabinets are typically the standard you would see in most American homes. The framed construction uses a face frame that is attached to the cabinet box, adding additional sturdiness to the cabinet box. With the presence of rails and stiles on the face frame, they make for easier installation and door/drawer adjustments.

- 2 5 Piece Door Construction

- 4 5 Piece Drawer Front Construction
- 5 5/8" Dovetail Drawer Box

- 7 Undermounted Full Extension Soft-Close Drawer Glides
- 8 .75" Plywood Shelf with Front Edge Banding
- 9 .5" Plywood Full Height Back Panel
- 10 .5" Plywood Box with UV Coated Matching Exterior

Frameless Cabinets

Frameless cabinets, often referred to as “full-access” or European style cabinets, have been steadily gaining popularity in the United States. Unlike framed cabinetry, frameless cabinets do not utilize a face frame attached to the cabinet box but instead relies on a thicker box and support rails for strength. With the absence of a face frame, full accessibility to the cabinet offers more storage solutions when compared to framed cabinetry.
